According to the article, they only have hydroelectric power plants as their main power source - of which, nationalization of their power grid has caused them problems since 2007. For example, they had a major blackout in 2016 that lasted for months. Due to power shortages, the government has to shut down the power every now and then as well.

Venezuela has faced years of power instability since about 2009, including two major blackouts in 2013 and a power and water crisis in 2016. At times the blackouts were caused in part by weather conditions like El Niño, but overall they have established a pattern of poor planning, mismanagement, and lack of investment on the part of the ...
